

Bad idea

As you may know, a really sad thing happened at a party a week ago, where many of you celebrated the end of the school year, but unfortunately one of them died due to an overdose of alcohol and drugs. His body could not take the mixture of different pills and alcohol and even though he was rushed to hospital, he didn't make it.

We are heart-broken and our prayers are with his family. I can't believe the fact that he is gone. He was such a kind guy and everybody loved him. He didn't want to attend the stupid party, but we made him go. I feel so bad. He had no experience with drugs and alcohol and that's what makes it even worse, he didn't deserve it. Every second since he died, I have kept thinking about the moment when we found him. I started to cry and somehow I knew he was gone.

This tragedy made me think about what to do to prevent you guys from coming up with these bad ideas. So I thought up a seminar where young people will get the chance to talk about their fears and problems with professionals and former drug addicts, who will be talking about their past and their obstacles. It's gonna be for free and it can be anonymous, so you don't have to be scared of opening up.

Thank you all for spending your time on reading this article and I wish you a great school year.
